The Flaming Arrow (Star Trek: New Earth, Book 4)

If you look carefully at it you might notice a character resembling Burns, sporting a rather mischievous smile, walking alongside the bright and beautiful personification of Fun, closely followed by the dark, grim, Calvinist-type women representing Superstition and Hypocrisy.

Colored Girl

At the level of content, he gave us the worst of himself: he laid out, with an intensity of self-scrutiny worthy of comparison to Kafka and Kierkegaard and Dostoyevsky, the extremes of his own narcissism, misogyny, compulsiveness, self-deception, dehumanizing moralism and theologizing, doubt in the possibility of love, and entrapment in footnotes-within-footnotes self-consciousness.

An American In Paris (Blues Theme) - Violin 1

Chapter 3 was mostly about the American navy and privateers during the American Revolution. Nadia knows that Marusia and Ivan love her, but also feels that they are not really her parents.
